What you need to know about:	Comics and Advertisements	Big Picture

Key Concept	Related Concepts	Global Context:	Advertisers can creatively repurpose established characters, drawing on the values and feelings audiences already attach to them to achieve a new persuasive purpose.
Creativity	Genres, Purpose, Audience imperatives	Personal and cultural expression

Comics Vocabulary
Panel	Single frame in a comic that shows one moment.
Sequence	Panels arranged in a deliberate order to tell a story.
Gutter	The space between panels.
Juxtaposition	Placing images side by side so they create meaning together.
Closure	The reader filling in what happens in the gutter between panels.
Onomatopoeia	A word that imitates a sound (e.g., boom, crash, zap).
Abstraction	Simplifying an image away from realism to focus on its essential features.
Caption	A box of narration separate from characters' speech.
Icon	An image that represents a person, idea or feeling (e.g., a cartoon face, a sweat drop).

Advertisements and Psychology
Slogan	A short, memorable phrase used in an advertising campaign.
Licensed Character	An existing character a company pays to use, unlike a mascot created for the brand.
Demographics	Characteristics of a group of people, such as age, gender, income.
Campaign	A planned series of ads with a shared message and goal.
Brand	Name, image and reputation that make a company recognizable.
Association	Connecting a product with a feeling/idea/image in audience's mind.
Call to action	Words that tell the audience what to do next (e.g., buy now).
Transfer	Linking a product to something the audience already likes so the feeling passes to the product.
Nostalgia	A warm longing for the past that ads use to create positive feelings.

Types of printed comics/cartoons
Comic strip	A short sequence of panels, usually published in newspapers.	Comic book	A magazine-style publication telling stories in sequential panels.
Single-panel cartoon	A one-panel joke, usually with a caption.	Graphic novel	A book-length comic with a complete story.
Political / editorial cartoon	Cartoon that comments on current events or public figures.	Manga	Japanese comics with their own visual conventions.

	Comics	Advertisements	Both used together
When analyzing, think about…	Where is the eye drawn? How does image use contrast/juxtaposition? How is movement/emotion conveyed visually? What is the POV of the "camera"? How are time/space manipulated?	Where is the eye drawn? What does the ad imply but not say? What does the ad want the audience to feel about themselves? How does the medium of the ad influence the design/message?	Which traits are borrowed? Who is speaking? How does the brand want the audience to feel about the character(s)? Has the character changed? How do the brand and character complement each other?